

Blackberry Meadows Farm

Website About Us Who's on the farm? Garden Share Weddings/Events Contact Us

July 21, 2014

Dear Jennifer,

Well - that was a needed break! Not that we took a break - but just deviating from our weekly routine helped. We made a big push to get crops weeded, weed whacked, cleaned up and planted. It really felt productive, in lieu of not having much to harvest.

Funnily enough - we talked with a couple of other farmers and they seem to have been in a similar boat! The weather patterns from earlier this spring are now noticeable in the harvest.

Fear not! The beets look great (thanks to our weeders - Carmie, Nicole, Evan, Kari, and team) and may even be harvestable tomorrow. That said, there's still more beets to weed. Again, there's an open invite to come on over and take some outdoor therapy and help us out. Bring head phones and listen to music and weed - or join in the friendly banter amongst interns philosophizing over the wisdom of weeding thistle or eating tomato horn worms. Whatever.

Farm Partners

Jarosinski Farms

We're excited to announce that Kevin has his processing house up, running, and permitted! This week, we'll have fresh chickens (whole birds,

In This Issue

Farm Partners
Farm Help
Farm News

Quick Links

www.blackberrymeadows.com
www.frankferd.com
www.allegroearth.com
www.natronabottlingcompany.com
www.hunterfarmsorganic.com

The Weekly Menu

What you can roughly expect to receive this week:

For the 6th pick up - we'll have Kale, Basil, Zucchini, squash, beets and/or beet greens, and herbs.

Join Our Mailing List

Forward To A Friend

Like us on Facebook